FundXtra, 2005 Models of Excellence Award

InfoCommerce 2005 Showcases Best of Breed Information Products; Internet Publishing Experts Name 10 Products as "Models of Excellence"

PHILADELPHIA --(Business Wire)-- Nov. 7, 2005 -- To illustrate the transformative effect the Web has had on data publishing, InfoCommerce Group will award 10 "Models of Excellence" at its InfoCommerce 2005 conference, November 7, at an awards cocktail reception sponsored by media investment bankers DeSilva & Phillips.

UpTick Data's remarkable FundXtra product suite takes highly detailed financial performance data and turns it into well-written analyst reports -- but without the analysts. The firm uses proprietary software to convert data into readable and informative text, and not simple boilerplate phrases strung together. As UpTick's founder Tom Elliot says, "...the neat thing about rules-based text generation is that we can create unique commentary for every mutual fund out there each month. We are not limited to covering only the most widely held funds or staggering the update frequency. This is what really sets these reports apart from others that are available." One major growth area in infocommerce is data-text integration; UpTick may be paving the way for more products that will be based on data-text generation.
